A PAUSE IN THE RECEPTION LINE of the President's Tea at El Camino College affords Dr. and Mrs. Stuart E. Marse of Torrance an opportunity for an appreciative exchange of smiles. Approximately 400 instructors and their spouses attended the annual fete, along with members of the board of trustees and their wives.
